ELEPHANT STORIES.

by an Angry Brute, An In. trepid Beast in Battle,

Major Rogers had been out shooting, and had discharged all his guns, when an elephant made a charge at him from the skirts of the jungle. There was no help for it except to run, and for 400 yards the Major kept just ahead, feeling at every step as if the trunk was trying to twist itself about his loins. A turn around a tree about his loins. A turn around a tree gave him a momentary advantage, which he made the most of by springing up into the branches; he was as nimble as a cat and as strong as a lion. One foot higher and he would have been out of the elephant's reach; but before he had time to draw up his legs the elephant had got him firmly clinched in the toils of his proboscis. Still Rogers pulled against him, thinking it better to have his leg wrenched from the socket than to fall back bodily into the animal's fall back bodily into the animal's power. The struggle, however, did not last long, for, to the delight of the pursued, the Wellington boot which the former wore slipped off, released the leg and saved the life of poor Rogers. The dilemma, however, did not end here, for the elephant finding himself balked of his prey, after destroying the boot, took up his quarters beneath the branches and kept his anticipated victim in the tree kept his anticipated victim in the tree for twenty-four hours, when the country postman happened to pass by. Rogers gave him notice of his posi-tion, and soon help came, and the elephant was frightened away by tom-toms and yelling. There is a beautiful story of an old elephant engaged in a battle on the plans of India. He was standard-bearer, and carried on his huge back the royal ensign, the rally point of the plans of India. The Mahrattas swept on in pursuit of the flying foe, but the elephant, like a rock, stood there with the dead and dying according to the same waying in its around, and the ensign waving in its place. For three days and nights it remained where its master had given the command to halt. No bribe or threat could move it. Then they sent to a village one hundred miles away and brought the mahout's little son. "The native Hindoo," the narrator of this story tells us, "from want of thought keeps up a constant drumming on the beast's head with the goadt or 'ankus;" I therefore hoped not to use it at all. Such an improvement all at once, however, not to use it at all. Such an improvement all at once, however, frored more than the elephantine mind could grasp. He began really to enjoy himself, going his own way more than mine, till at last he marched straight into an immense forest tree of the banyan species, and commenced to browse. He seized the boughs above his head, and, tugging violently at them; brought them down on my devoted skull. This was too much. I raised the ankus and brought it down on his head with a blow that brought blood through the skin. This had the desired effect, skin. This had the desired effect, and he at once bundled off along the road by which he knew I wanted to go. He merely took with him a branch about the size of a small apple tree to discuss as he went along. From this moment we were friends, and I don't think I ever had to use the hook again so as to bring blood.

Congressmen only the Country's Clerks,

The average Congressman considers himself a great man, but he is only a clerk after all. He is paid by the country to come here and apportion out the public funds to the running of the government. Other men decade how much the government needs, and they furnish the Congressmen the figures. The average member knows nothing about it, and the best member for the country perhaps is he who knows the least. We merely pay them to divide our money for us. The government is already organized. We have all the laws we need, and the United States, if it were not for the necessity of the formality of passing the appropriations, could do better without Congress than with it. Still we have it, and we have to pay for it. The average Congressman consid-Mide is measure day of the 2md day of September 1855 appointed administrative of the extate of 0. D. Young, deceased. The following took place during the Revolutionary war. Lord Percy's regiment was about commencing to fire at a target on Boston Common fire at a target on Boston Common one day, when an awkward looking country boy that had outgrown his jacket and tronsers, came up.

"Now, my boys, for a trial of your skill!" said Percy; "imagine the mark to be a Yankee—and here is a guinea for whosoever hits his head."

Jonathan drew near the trial. When the first soldier fired and missed, and he slapped his hands on his thigh and laughed immoderately. When the second soldier fired and When the second soldier fired and missed, Jonathan threw his hat and "I don't know; I could try." "Give him a gun, soldier, and you may return the fellow's laugh," said

Jonathan took the gun, and looking at every part of it carefully, said: "It won't burst, will it? Father's gun don't shine like this, but I guess it's rather a better gun." "Why do you guess to?" asked Bercy. "Cause I know what that'll due and I doubt about this 'ere," replied Jonathan. "But look o' here! you call that 'ere mark a Yankee; and I

"Well, you may call it a British regular, if you please," said Percy.
"Well, regular it is, then. Now for freedom, as father says."

Jonathan raised his gun, and fired. "There, I guess that 'ere red coat has got a hole in it!" cried he, turning to the soldiers.

"Why don't you laugh at me now, as that 'ere fellow said you might?"

"You awkward rascal, that was an accident. Do you think you could hit the mark again?" inquired Percy. "I don't know, but I can try."

"Give him another gun, soldier; and take care the clown don't shoot you. I should not fear to stand before the mark myself."

"I guess you'd better try it." "Why, do you think you could hit "I don't know, indeed; but I could

"Is it a good one?" inquired Jonathan, ringing it on the pavement. "Good? Yes. Now clear away.

"I should like to stay and see them fellows kill some more Yankees."
"Begone! or I shall have to put you under guard. Office, give him a pass to Charlestown, and never let him come among our troops again."

What is Castoria?

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's pro-crip ion for Infants and Children. Improper food North British and Mercantile and neglect of bathing make most all chil dren sick at times. They must have relief from symptoms indicated by flatuleur; vomiting, purging, fevers and constitution The formula of Castoria is published. Lib eral physicians everywhere now agree that it will accomplish this end. Castoria is harmes; it does not contain a particle of mor phme or other narcotic substance. Paregoric, Bateman's Props, soothing syrups and ill other medicines for children, contain opnum in some form. Castoria has been in use over thirty years and during that time has carried hope into more homes, pre vented more protracted sicknesses and reduced the apalling death rate among infants and children to a greater extent than al other known remedies,

"It's a perfect outrage, Mr. Winks. The idea of inviting those gentlemen to dinner when you knew the house was full of company. Why, it will make thirteen at table."

"Surely you are not superstitions about that. Having thirteen at table "Well, it will when you see what a small roast the butcher sent."

The United States uses three times as much paint as any other country.

Charity bawls are said to be those at infant asylums. The managers of these institutions in large cities, however, now use Red Star Cough Cure which relieves sick children and puts What Makes Complexion.

A pigment under the epidermis makes the complexion. The colored person has a black pigment, the brunette a light brown pigment, and the blonde a still lighter pigment. When there is no pigment in the skin an albino is the result, with pink eyes, white hair and white skin. When there is an excess of pigment freckles, moles and birth marks appear. Freckles are not alone due to the action of the sun. Some people have them in abundance on parts of the body not exposed to the sun. The hairs are hollow tubes, and have a supply of pigment sent into them which determines the color of the hair. The pigment comes from the blood. White hair may be from absence of pigment or from the presence of air in the tubes.

Slight Reduction from Card Price.

"What is the price of this organ?" asked a gentleman of a dealer.
"Three hundred and sixty-five dollars," replied the latter.

"Phew!" exclaimed the gentle-man. "Ain't that rather high?" "Oh, no, sir; you can see for your self, it is card rates."

"Forty-three dollars, sir."
